NOT REAL CORNER

2) SAMMY STAR

Whoever thought this one up must be on something extremely hallucinogenic!

Probably the most surreal and completely unconvincing character ever created.

Dining out?

In todays society the paths of food and entertainment seldom cross. In the eighties the catering industry made no secret as to where its intentions lay, preparing cheap and cheerful scampi-in-a-basket pub meals to more individually prepared mealtime delights. Hers's a recommended list of exceptions:

- 1) Jacky Chan Restaurant (Shrewsbury)
Succulent Cantonese cuisine served either indoors or in the ever popular `Kingdom of Bamboo' where even the menus are made of bamboo! Get there early on Wednesday evening for illegal panda racing.
- 2) World of Plasticine (Cardiff)
Scarcely believable 1988 theme restaurant specializing in colourful imaginative meals for the deranged. Afterwards why not relax in the company of one of our very own plasticine masseurs?
- 3) Donkey Chop-House (West London)
Versatile converted 3rd floor maisonette run by a charming couple of illegal immigrants. The food is positively divine and is served to a background of hideous hard edged brays.
- 4) Ye Olde Monkey with Pears (North Yorkshire)
Well established real ale house with a reputation for the unusual. Currently offering a fine selection of fur-cheeses as well as boasting Yorkshires first vomiting asylum.
- 5) The `On-Skis' Hotel (Grampian Region)
Situated at the foot of Mount Krankie, this popular 30 bedroom hotel specializes in hearty mixed grills. At these very reasonable prices, why not wade knee-deep in cholesterol and come out smiling and reeking of fried bread?

Recent criticism of the levels of ability achieved in GCSE examinations have sent shockwaves through the authorities. Many believe that last years exams were not a stern enough test for school leavers. A quick glance at next years GCSE French papers suggest that next years could provide more demanding objectives.

NORTHERN REGIONAL EXAMINATIONS BOARD

Part One

- i) When the tape begins, you will hear a conversation between Sir Alf Ramsey and a group of French sports journalists. Having listened to the conversation twice, write down the scorer of Englands three goals in the 1966 World Cup Final.
- ii) In section two, you will hear a gentleman asking the way to Woore Racecourse. Bearing in mind that the track has been closed for over thirty years, jot down the passer by's misleading directions.
- iii) Listen carefully to the telephone conversation between Madame Voiture and the hotel manager. Write down the type of room she would like, the number of people wanting to stay and the reason for the large vat of Daddies Sauce on the veranda.

Part Two

- i) In part one of your speaking test, your teacher will play the part of your penpal. Before he goes any further, quickly explain that he is far too old for the part and that you wouldn't be seen dead writing to a bloke with a beard and a kipper tie.
- ii) In situation two, you play the part of a petrol pump attendant helping an impatient motorist. After arguing the toss for half an hour, tell the motorist calmly that he's driving on the wrong side of the road and that you don't work for £2.50 an hour for bastards like him.

CYRILLE MAGANAKY STOLE MY GIRL

She said she had a famous dad
But he was the man in the Radion ad
We met in the supermarket queue
I drove my trolley up closer to you
I could've swore the day she said
I'll be Sharon Maughan
and you be Tony Head
Because we don't go out at night
We stay in the flat
and we bitch and fight
She gave me shelter from the rain
And veggie pizza's and Carla Lane
And this commercial is here to stay
But right now, she's wishing me away

She ran away to Gretna Green
With an attacker from a different team
Maganaky of the Cameroon
With his nagasaki and his Sonic Boom
Sonic Lady was a touch too good
And now she spends her life at stud
Although she must economize
Well at least she gets the exercise
It's getting really hard to think
I took Terry Thomas out for a drink
And I'm left to clear up the mess
'cos he's probably got the shakes
I guess

Roger Milla will seal your fate,
he's not 38!

I thought I saw you in a dream
In the formation of a custard cream
And there are fifteen different ways
Of qualifying for the second phase
Out on the street, out of a home
At least I know he'll never get her to Rome
I plead for charity, then despair
Of Freddie Garrity and Lionel Blair
This is the only life I'd choose
And these are the ones I want to abuse
I gave my life to beer and cigs
And now I'm out with Marietta Higgs

Roger Milla will seal your fate,
he's not 38!

NATIONAL DOG RACING DIRECTORY

Firstly, tie a small polystyrene bone to a burst water main and sharply tug the string, causing the bone to shoot sideways. Then, it's three times round the kitchen, up the stairs, over the bed and down again. Send details of your dog and its recorded time to the usual address. See your own pets name alongside living legends like Butch VII, Mongrel Plod, Trundlewheel X and Little Fido.

In todays social climate, there can be little doubt that educational reform is an issue that effects us all. Despite being well aware of the drawbacks in our education system, Britains youngsters are generally considered to be trailing their European counterparts. Recent guidelines designed to help tomorrows generation are listed below:

Age 5-6 years should be able to:

- 1) Tell the difference between a cream-cracker and a horse.
- 2) Avoid Jimmy Saville in the street.
- 3) Recognise the importance of the FA Charity Shield.
- 4) Order an ice cream in eight different languages.

Age 10-11 years should be able to:

- 1) Enjoy a healthy knowledge of Venn diagrams and cosine ratios.
- 2) Fart in assembly.
- 3) Know an ox-bow lake when they see one.
- 4) Be able to order a pint of Tetleys in eight different languages.

Age 14-15 years should be able to:

- 1) Give the teacher a good seeing to.
- 2) Understand the ethics of greyhound racing.
- 3) Think about forming a band.
- 4) Not want to order a pint of Tetleys in any language.
